Activity fee review process debated

By Sandra J. Adkins

The Committee to Study Student Activity Fees is open to suggestions on ways to change the four-year review cycle that all campus groups funded by student activity fees are subject to, Committee Chairman Emory W. Carr, associate professor of modern languages, said.

At the Wednesday meeting, Carr said the committee needs to think about what process would be an improvement on the four-year cycle.

"I can understand the problems of the groups in trying to project budgets for four years down the line, especially in the last two years," he said.

Representatives for The Parthenon came before the committee to present its budget for review and to discuss the requested $1.50 increase.

Carr asked Dr. Deryl R. Leaming, director of the W. Page Pitt School of Journalism, to give his opinion of the four-year cycle structure.

"It is hard to plan for four years down the road and hold to it. We always have to make a lot of changes," he said. "President Hayes can't do it for the university."

Terry L. Kerns, Parthenon adviser, said, "The two major items that make up at least 80 percent of our budget are out of our control when it comes to planning for four years."

He said printing costs cannot be predicted accurately and that the West Virginia Legislature decides the rates at which staff members are paid.

Carr said that because the committee is reviewing almost half of the groups on the activity fee list this year, it might be more effective to go to a two-year cycle.

"The down-cycle in student enrollment is another factor that makes it difficult to project budgets for the next four years," he said.

Intercollegiate athletics is scheduled to come before the committee Wednesday to present its budget and requested fee increase.

The committee will vote on requests from each group after hearing the presentations of all the groups.

Carr said the recommendations of the committee need to be submitted to President Hayes before Christmas.

MU students get discounts on bus rides to downtown

A reduced fare to downtown for Marshall students is being offered by the Tri-State Transit Authority to get more students to ride the buses and take advantage of downtown merchants, Vickie Shaffer, TTA general manager, said.

Shaffer said students showing their Marshall ID can ride from Hal Greer Boulevard to the Ninth Street plaza for 25 cents.

The new system, which began Monday, will continue until further notice. "The idea came from the Retail Merchants Association," Shaffer said. "They want to make it easier for students to get downtown."

There is no police system to show that students ride only in the designated area. Shaffer said she was relying on students to be honor bound and only go on the selected route.

Students are starting to catch on to the new rates, she said.

There is also a special fare being offered on Saturdays for anyone interested in riding the bus.

For 25 cents anyone can ride anywhere on Saturday, she said. The new system goes along with free parking on Saturdays.

When West Virginians go to the polls Tuesday, they will not only be electing government officials, but also will be deciding the fate of three proposed constitutional amendments. On page 2, The Parthenon takes a brief look at those amendments, trying to give the readers a better understanding of them.

The Parthenon planned to feature interviews today with congressional candidates in West Virginia's 2nd Congressional District. However, those candidates, Harley O. Staggers Jr. and J. D.

Hinkle, failed to respond to questions submitted to them weeks in advance. Today's article on the amendments concludes our five-part series on Election '82.

Guidelines on directory information changed

By Nancy Hathaway

The Student Conduct and Welfare Committee approved Wednesday changes in directory information policy to meet guidelines set by the Department of Health, Education and Welfare.

The HEW guidelines are in accordance to the Family Educational Rights and Privacy Act of 1974.

The changes remove class standing, medical history, performance records and previous participation of members of athletic teams from the list of information that may be released.

Directory information may be made public in directories, program announcements, press releases, recognition programs and publications, and media presentations.

Directory information may be released without prior permission to anyone requesting it unless the student files a cancellation for disclosure of information form with the office of the dean of Student Affairs. The forms are then forwarded to the registrar's office.

The items considered directory information are name; address; telephone number, both campus and permanent; date and place of birth; major field of study; campus participation in officially recognized activities and sports; weight and height of members of athletic teams; dates of attendance; degrees and awards received or attained, and the most previous educational institution attended.

In other committee action, a new housing contract was given full approval by the committee with one correction, that the policy on non-discrimination include political affiliation. The correction is to be forwarded to the Housing Office.

West Virginians to decide on three amendments

By Jennifer Dokes

In addition to electing candidates to office Tuesday, West Virginia voters will go to the polls to decide the fate of three proposed constitutional amendments.

The first amendment put before the electorate would permit county school levies, indebtedness and bonds to be approved by a simple majority of the votes cast, Stone said. The Fair Educational Opportunity Amendment would change the present constitutional amendment which requires a levy to receive 60 percent of the vote to pass.

In the Sheriff's Succession Amendment, voters will decide if a person can hold the office of sheriff for more than two consecutive terms. The amendment would repeal Section 3, Article 9 of the West Virginia Constitution, which provides that a person cannot serve more than all or part of two terms consecutively.

Editor's note: On Tuesday, West Virginia voters will decide whether to adopt three proposed amendments: the Fair Educational Opportunity Amendment, the Sheriff's Succession Amendment, and the Property Tax Limitation and Homestead Exemption Amendment. In this article, The Parthenon gives a brief explanation of each amendment in the hope it will aid readers in making a decision at the polls. With this article, The Parthenon concludes its five-part series on Election '82.

But perhaps the most complex issue to be decided Tuesday is the Property Tax Limitation and Homestead Exemption Amendment, John Farmer, assistant state tax commissioner, said Thursday.

"It is extremely complicated, but what it essentially boils down to is that property taxes will go up very sharply next year - about 59 percent," Farmer said. "We're talking about an increase of more than $200 million next year."

In addition, the amendment creates a statewide excess levy that could take the place of county excess levies, and gives more authority to the state Legislature in homestead exemptions for all homeowners.

Memorial Student Center's financial picture improving

By William Cornwell

The Memorial Student Center is in much better financial health this year than in past years, according to Warren S. Myers, director of auxiliary services.

Myers said the student center has been operating at a deficit for the past several years, but he expects to operate with a surplus in the future.

"At the end of the fiscal year in 1985, I would like to have a $75,000 surplus in the bank," Myers said. "We are in the process of trying to place ourselves in some financial stability."

Myers said high bills for operation of the student center are a problem but services cannot be cut any further than they are to maintain effective service for the students.

Myers said that conservation of energy is stressed to save money.

"We educate the staff of the center to watch utilities and make sure that lights are off in unused parts of the building," Myers said. "Our building is used so much and our hours of operation are so long that utility use is great, but we do our best to conserve."

Revenue is produced for the student center by services geared to the students and Myers said that these revenues are growing at a fast pace.

"Electronic and pinball games, recreation rentals and sales at the information desk have helped bring the money in," Myers said. "We also get 13 percent of the money made by Custom Management Co., the food service contractor, from banquets and dinners that they serve in the W. Don Morris Multi-Purpose Room."

Myers said he thinks another state spending freeze will not affect the student center as much as other parts of the university.

"We don't fill vacant positions and make many purchases during a freeze, so we save money and help our own financial state," Myers said.

Myers said that the student center needs some new equipment, but must wait to purchase it until money is available.

"We are working on repairing the old furniture and we will possibly buy some new furniture," Myers said. "We also need to work on our heating and cooling systems in the center and make some improvements in the cafeteria area."

Myers said he gets ideas for improvements in conservation and operation of the student center by consulting with other student center personnel around the country and adopting those ideas for use at Marshall.

Poetry leading submissions; et cetera deadline Monday

By John Salomon

Submissions to et cetera must be turned in by 3 p.m. Monday to be considered for publication in the spring 1983 issue, according to Drema S. Redd, Huntington senior and editor.

Approximately 60 submissions from 40 students have been accepted preliminarily and final decisions will be made by the staff members of the literary magazine after all contributions are in, Redd said.

The magazine will be sent to Graphic Services for printing by November 15 after the layout and typesetting for it has been completed, she said.

Redd said 2,500 copies of the issue will be distributed in late April or early May.

Most of the material submitted so far has been poetry, Redd said. Et cetera will also contain prose, short stories, artwork and photographs, she said.

Awards of $50 each will be given for the works judged best in poetry, prose, and art-photography categories. Judging of the awards will be done by members of the Department of English and winners will be notified by mid-December, she said.

Submissions to the magazine must include the student's address and telephone number to be considered for publication, Redd said.

Contributions may be submitted in Corbly Hall Room 406.

Master Chorale to perform; will present 'Requiem' Monday

By Shelly L. Ramsey

The Marshall University-Huntington Master Chorale will present Faure's "Requiem" at 8 p.m. Monday in Smith Recital Hall.

The event is free and open to the public, according to Dr. Wendell Kumlien, professor of music and director of the 38-voice choir.

Ruth Crow of Ironton, Ohio, will be the featured soprano soloist and Edwin Harkless, Meigs County, Ohio, music teacher, will be the baritone soloist.

The group consists of "students and townspeople with extensive music background" either in musical stage works, choral groups, solo performance and/or voice study, Kumlien said.

He said the Master Chorale was formed in September 1979 to offer adult singers in the Huntington area the opportunity to participate in a semi-professional musical atmosphere.

Orchestral accompaniment for Monday's program has been made possible by the Music Performance Trust Fund of the American Federation of Musicians, Local 362, Kumlien said.

Women's conference begins Nov. 5

By Kevin Gergely

Women-oriented topics will be explored in two days of programs, according to Patti Matters, coordinator of the Women's Center.

The third annual Women's Studies Conference will begin at 6 p.m. Nov. 5 with a buffet dinner at the Campus Christian Center, Matters said. The keynote address will follow at 7:30 p.m. and will be delivered by Dr. Bernice R. Sandler, director of the Association of American Colleges' Project on the Status and Education of Women.

Beginning Nov. 6 at 9 a.m., there will be three programs to choose from, so that there will be something of interest to everyone, Matters said.

Topics scheduled for the first session are: feminist theatre in Mexico; sexism in education; and women and religion.

The second session will begin at 10:30 a.m. Planned for that time are a workshop on assertive communications for women in the educational institution, a study of developing programs for women, and a panel session on women in West Virginia history.

At 1 p.m., programs include a lecture on women writers, a workshop on female entrepreneurship, and a study on sex roles.

At 2:30 p.m., programs will include a session on career planning, a study of women's history, and a lecture on feminist values and militarism.

Speakers at the sessions will be from Marshall, other colleges and universities or those who are experts in their chosen fields, Matters said.

The final agenda item is a number of readings by Appalachian women writers, occurring at 4 p.m.

Registration is necessary in order to attend the conference and for the meals planned, Matters said.

All-Greek dance Saturday at 8 p.m.

By Bill Bands

The first Greek Halloween Dance, sponsored by the Marshall Panhellenic Council, will be from 8 p.m. to 1 a.m. Saturday at the United Steelworkers of America Local 40 Hall on Buffington Street in Guyandotte. Admission is $1.

Panhellenic president Meg Crickenberger, Hillsboro junior, said the dance is limited to Greeks, and only those in costume will be admitted.

FOR THE RECORD

Student Senate moving in right direction

We have criticized Student Senate in the past, but now it is time to give it some credit.

Senate has planned a retreat for Friday and Saturday. Student Government President Jennifer K. Fraley has said the retreat will consist of workshops on leadership building and a series of caucus and committee meetings.

Student Senate President Kyle "Kookie" Adams seems to be genuinely interested and concerned about the role of Student Senate and is taking positive steps to make senate better.

Adams will go into the retreat with ideas about matters senate should be concerning themselves with, matter which are of real importance to students.

Adams has expressed a sincere desire to formulate goals for the senate. If these clear-cut goals benefit senate, they also will benefit the student body.

We commend Adams and all those in Student Government who have recognized weaknesses and are eager to act to correct them.

Student Senate has potential to be an effective and positive force for Marshall University students. With the leadership of people like Adams, we feel confident senate will come closer to realizing its potential.

The haunting of Old Main

Moonlight filtered through dark, foreboding clouds, as the full moon moved slowly across the night sky. The leaves of the large beech tree in front of Old Main fluttered in the cool, autumn breeze, causing ominous shadows to dance about as if to pay tribute to the spirits of a time gone by.

Old Main, Marshall's oldest building, stands as a reminder of that time. But with the coming of Halloween, a time for spirits and goblins, the landmark structure takes on a new significance.

I walked into Old Main, just as I have many times, but I had a different reason - I wanted to find the ghostly spirits that seemingly haunt the attic.

I rode the elevator with my guides, Karl J. Egnatoff, vice president for administration; John McKinney, communications manager, and Bruce Greenwood, auditorium manager. Finally we reached the third floor and after climbing a few more steps we stepped into a part of Old Main few people know exists.

When we entered the attic, it seemed we had stepped back into time. Only the elevator shaft, which had been added years after the initial construction of that part of the building, was there as a symbol of modern technology.

In this attic remnants of a Shakespearean theater remains, and to many, the ghostly spirits of that time still exist.

At one time, the theater was known as "Old Chapel," and the Erosophian and Virginia literary societies used the theater for meetings, plays and debating between groups.

The spirit of much rivalry and debate expressed there at the beginning of the Twentieth Century still is maintained in the dusty and deteriorated loft, no longer used except as a storage area.

Now if one listens carefully, with an open mind and imagination, the sound of the debaters and orators still may be heard. I listened quietly. Were the spirits of those debaters still there? Do they still move about the attic?

Perhaps, but it will not be much longer until the spirits will no longer be able to haunt the attic because part of the university's campus improvement plans calls for the demolition of the attic, and thus a part of the past.

Old Verb's fans playing in new Dugout

By Ruth Giachino

Verb's is back with a new image and location offering a much more personal and relaxing atmosphere, according to Joe Verbage, co-owner of Verb's Dugout.

Verbage said Verb's Dugout will offer three cocktail table games (including Pac-Man), dancing, a disc jockey, food and a big color TV screen.

"The screen is for all sports events, and at 3 p.m. we'll show 'General Hospital,'" Verbage said.

Verb's Tenth Inning, located at 410 10th St., closed in April. "The lease was up and the rent was too high to stay there," Verbage said.

Aside from the atmosphere and a smaller building that is located closer to Marshall's campus, the Dugout differs from the Tenth Inning in that there will be no cover charge or dress code, drinks will be served in glassware, sandwiches will be served until 8 p.m. and Nachos will be served all night.

The daily specials include "The D.H.," a homemade barbeque on an extra large hamburger bun with cole slaw, for $2.25; "The Grand slam," which contains turkey, beef, ham, and swiss cheese on a bun with lettuce, tomato and Verb's own special sauce; the "7th Inning Stretch," a combination of Nachos, homemade cheese sauce and hot peppers (optional), for $1.75.

Another feature is the "Dieter's Delight," a tuna salad served on a lettuce leaf, garnished with pineapple slice, green pepper, carrot strips and a hard boiled egg, for $2.50.

Verbage said the liquor license he is trying to obtain has been delayed due to zoning.

Verb's Dugout opened Oct. 19 to a "larger-than-expected crowd," Verbage said.

Many of the patrons said they would return to the Dugout, especially if it was able to retain its "laid-back" atmosphere.

"It's a lot different from the old Verb's (the Tenth Inning). It's classier," A. Lanette Lewis, Huntington senior, said. "It's nice for a change instead of the same old places."

"The bar-word about town was the opening of Verb's so I had to check it out," Mike F. Williams, Huntington graduate student, said. "It's nicer than the original. There's a nicer crowd, more of a get-to-know crowd."

Coffeehouse bar draws record crowd

By William Cornwell

Special events this week are marking the opening of the new bar in the Memorial Student Center Coffeehouse.

The bar, which serves only beer, was opened last Friday with a concert by John Bayley.

"Last Friday, we had the largest volume of people at the student center than for any other event in its history, with our bar opening," Rene Rodriguez, food services director, said.

Rodriguez said the Coffeehouse Committee of the Student Activities Board has planned special entertainment for the entire week for the "christening" of the bar.

"The Coffeehouse has more entertainment going on this week than ever in its history," Rodriguez said. "This activity has been a great need for the Coffeehouse."

The celebration will conclude tonight and Saturday with performances by The Spread from 9 p.m. to midnight both nights.

Rodriguez said the Coffeehouse will also have its annual Halloween party on Saturday. The party will be sponsored by food services and the Coffeehouse Committee.

"I would like to see as many students as possible come in costume to our party on Saturday night," Rodriguez said. "I know that there will be other groups having Halloween parties, but we think we will have much to offer those attending our party."

Prizes will be awarded to the student with the best looking costume and the most outrageous costume. Judging will be done by the audience with the winner being the one who receives the loudest applause.

A dinner for two at Toohey's, canned hams and gift certificates for use at local businesses are among the door prizes available at the party. Students will receive tickets as they come to the party. The winning tickets will be drawn at various times during the evening.

The new bar, which is 24 feet long, was built in the past two weeks by Rodriguez and Jim Moore, Huntington senior.

"I knew what I wanted the bar to look like, but Jim took my idea and built the bar mostly on his own," Rodriguez said.

In the future, Rodriguez would like to give the bar a true Marshall flavor.

"I want to put a buffalo head over the bar along with other Marshall memorabilia," Rodriguez said.

Rodriguez said he saw a need for many changes and improvements in the student center food services when he began working here in August.

"The time had come to make some changes," Rodriguez said. "This new bar was the biggest need that I saw here."

Local night clubs cater to varying music tastes

By Dennis Bright

While many Marshall students like to dance the night away when they take a break from their studies, there are some who prefer to relax to the slower pace of their favorite country and western song.

Whichever pace the student prefers, the Huntington area has several night clubs which offer entertainment.

JDB'S

JDB's in the Holiday Inn-Gateway, 6007 U.S. Route 60 East, offers new contemporary music for its customers to dance to, club manager John Miller said.

Miller said more Marshall students go to JDB's on Monday and Wednesday nights because of the specials that are offered.

"Monday night is two for one night. You get two drinks for the price of one all night long," he said. "On Wednesday night the first two drinks for the ladies are free."

THE MILL RUNN

The Mill Runn located in the Ramada Inn, 5600 U.S. Route 60 East, gives students a chance to relax to music of a slower pace.

Manager Tony Clark said the club plays country and western music from albums for its customers to dance to.

"We use several radio personalities as our disc jockeys," he said. "Jim Schneider and Mike Chapman from WTCR work for us as DJ's as does Deputy Sheriff Mike Chapman."

Clark said he thinks people come to the Mill Runn because it's a good place to meet people and because it's not a "red-neck" bar.

"Another reason people come to the Mill Runn is the good prices on Monday and Wednesday night," he said. "Our prices are very competitive and very reasonable."

"Monday is double deal in night. All bar drinks are priced two for one," he said. "Wednesday is ladies night. The first two drinks for the ladies are free."

THE POMPEII CLUB

Live entertainment is the specialty of The Pompeii Club, located in the Holiday Inn-Downtown.

Club manager Gay Greenwalt said some type of live entertainment is provided each month. She said the bands that come in to perform usually play from two weeks to a month.

"Sunshower is the band we have playing now," she said. "They play mostly rock but take requests to play almost anything."

She said Sunshower will be playing until Saturday night. They begin playing at 9 p.m. and play till closing, she said.

DOUBLE DRIBBLE

For students who are into Marshall athletics as well as dancing, the Double Dribble, 320 20th St., has both.

Owner Vince Carter said his club plays almost any kind of music that you can dance to. He also said there are pictures of athletic All-Americans from Marshall throughout the club.

"There are more pictures of basketball players but that's because there are more All-American basketball from Marshall than any other sport," he said.

Marshall students make up about 99 percent of the club's business, he said. He thinks his club is Marshall's number one night spot.

The Double Dribble like many other area clubs offers a variety of specials to its customers. He said Tuesday night is quarter beer night all night long and Thursday is "Drink-n-drown" night. Thursday night ladies are admitted free and can drink free between 8:30 and 9:30, he said.

The recently opened Coffeehouse bar in the Memorial Student Center appears to have been a popular night spot earlier this week. During the week, musical groups were featured and Saturday the Coffeehouse will host a Halloween party. The bar serves only beer. Manager of the bar is Rene Rodriguez. Photo by Merla Dawson Broomes.

THE 1896

The 1896 also has a variety of specials according to Holley.

"Tuesday night is quarter beer night all night long," he said. "Thursday is ladies night. All prices are happy hour prices and it's quarter beer also."

He said the club is having a Halloween party Saturday night. Anyone who wears a costume will be admitted free, he said.

THE INFERNO

The Inferno, 200 22nd St., has several attractions which no other night club in the tri-state area has according to manager John Jarvis.

He said the club has a Gilley's punching bag, Satin the Bull, an indoor skeet shooting range, table to table telephones and an all new indoor dunk tank, which will be used all winter long.

Jarvis said The Inferno is also the only establishment in the area which has two clubs under the same roof.

"On one side of the club we have live rock bands," he said. "On the other side we play dance music."

On top of all these attractions, Jarvis said The Inferno offers specials on its drinks.

"Tuesday night is quarter beer night and there is no cover charge for ladies," he said. "Cover charge for guys is a dollar."

"Thursday night is ladies night. Ladies get their first drink free," he said.

TOOHEY'S

Toohey's, 931 Sixth Ave., offers specialties including "Big Band Night" the last Thursday of every month and, when the strike ends, Monday Night Football, with two-for-one drinks every time a team scores a touchdown, co-owner Valerie A. Morgan said.

Morgan described Toohey's as a "gathering place," not just a restaurant.

Win over The Citadel would give edge

Soccer team's SC fate to be decided today

By Bill Bands

"We're down to the most important game of the season."

Although Marshall soccer coach Jack DeFazio acknowledges that he has worn out that phrase this season, he said this time he is sure it is true.

Marshall will host The Citadel at 4 p.m. Friday at Fairfield Stadium in a match which will decide the Herd's Southern Conference fate.

Marshall is in second place in the conference with a 4-2 league record. Conference leader Appalachian State is 3-1-1.

DeFazio said if the Herd beats The Citadel, Marshall will be in the driver's seat in the conference race.

"Appy State has a very poor record on the road, and their final two conference games are at Furman and Western Carolina, so if we can beat The Citadel, I'd say we're assured the championship," he said. "Right now, we've pretty much locked up second place."

DeFazio said there is the possibility the Herd could finish in a tie.

"The Citadel has five conference games left, including us, so even if we beat them, it's conceivable that we could finish tied with The Citadel or Davidson," he said. "Anything's possible in this crazy conference."

If Marshall ties The Citadel today, there is also a possibility of a tie with Appalachian State. Based on previous contests this season, if the Herd ties Davidson, which is 3-2 in the conference, or The Citadel, Marshall would come out ahead. But, in a tie with Appalachian State, Marshall would fall behind based on the Mountaineers' 1-0 victory over the Herd earlier this season.

The Citadel, 1-1 in the conference and 5-5 overall, is led by forward Tom Scheerer and a tough defense, which returns four all-conference players.

"They are similar to Davidson defensively," DeFazio said. "They have given up very few goals this season and they have a very good goal keeper, so we'll have our work cut out for us on offense."

Marshall finishes its season at 4 p.m. Monday at the University of Kentucky in Lexington.

DeFazio said he knows little about UK, but he said the Wildcats play a tough schedule and have quality players.

Marshall to battle Bulldogs

Randle hopes victory memories will charge Herd

By Tom Aluise

When Marshall dons its away uniforms tomorrow at The Citadel, Coach Sonny Randle said he hopes the memories of last week's 12-10 victory will be fresh in his player's minds.

"It's amazing what a little confidence can do for a football team," Randle said. "I just hope the players can remember what they felt like when they came off the field against Akron."

If the Herd can pull off a triumph over the Bulldogs tomorrow, it would mark the first time Marshall has won back-to-back games since it defeated Morehead State and Kent State in the first two weeks of the 1980 season.

MU will also be shooting for its second Southern Conference victory since it joined the league in 1977.

The Herd is currently 0-3 in the SC and 2-5 overall, while The Citadel has won one of two in the league. The Bulldogs are 3-4 on the season.

"The Citadel will be a difficult task to hurdle, especially in Charleston (S.C.) where they're tough," Randle said. "They don't lose very often on their home field."

East Tennessee State has been the only team to down the Bulldogs in Charleston this year. The Citadel managed only a field goal in that game and recorded the same score in last week's loss at Navy.

"We haven't played a real good football game all year," Citadel coach Art Baker said. "Right now we could easily be 0-7."

We lost 14 starters off last year's team and three coaches and we just haven't played as well," Baker said.

Nevertheless, Randle said by no means is he taking The Citadel lightly. Especially since the game will take place in Charleston where visiting teams must contend not only with the Bulldog football team but also the noisy Cadets in the stands.

Both Randle and Baker said the Southern Conference matchup tomorrow is a big game for their squads.

"Both teams are in similar positions," Baker said. "We need a win badly and Marshall does to. They have momentum coming off a win but I guess we have somewhat of an advantage playing at home."

I'm impressed with Marshall's football team. I don't see any weak spots in the defense. And the offense has gotten better and better each week. The freshman quarterback (Carl Fodor) looked impressive in Marshall's win over Akron."

The Citadel's offense is led by quarterback Gerald Toney and freshman tailback Stanford Glenn, who has been The Citadel's leading rusher this season with 352 yards on 61 carries.

Defensively, tackle Jim Ettari and linebacker Mike Varner serve as the anchors. Ettari, who was an all-conference choice last season and can bench press 500 pounds, is the Bulldogs' leading tackler this season.

Ettari, however, has not been enough to keep The Citadel's defense, which was among the best in the country last year, up to par this season. The Bulldogs rank last in the SC in total defense, which is a complete 360 degree turn from where they were in 1981.

Cross country team to compete at OU Coach 'Z' says no salary change

By Shep Brown

Marshall's cross country team's meet at Ohio University in Athens tomorrow will mark its final performance before the Southern Conference Championships next week.

"Ohio U. is one of the best teams we've run against," eighth-year coach Rod O'Donnell said. Ohio won the Marshall Invitational meet Sept. 11.

Even though the Ohio meet is next, O'Donnell said all of his team's attention has been focused on the conference meet.

"I guess you can say the entire year is based upon this (conference) meet," O'Donnell said.

The conference championships are set for 11 a.m., Nov. 6, at Western Carolina (Cullowhee, N.C.).

As for predictions, "All I know for sure is that East Tennessee (State) will win. They're ranked fourth in the country," he said.

O'Donnell said he has been pleased with his team's performance this season as even the mid-season injuries did not stop them from finishing in the top third of most the meets.

Two of the Herd's runners, John Warnock, Georgetown, Ontario, Canada, sophomore; and Brent Swartz, Strongsville, Ohio, junior were injured in separate meets during the season.

"Injuries are a part of cross country just as any other sport. We've seen our unlucky days," O'Donnell said.

Marshall's top runner, Mike Dodge, Wheeling junior, will run Saturday along with Roy Poloni, Milton, Ontario, sophomore, and Chris Parsons, Barboursville senior.

Head Basketball Coach Bob Zuffelato said to the best of his knowledge his salary of $38,924 will not change with his new position as associate director of athletics.

He said he will travel and visit with groups around the state as part of promotional and fund-raising duties included in his new position.
